

media on the move

Enjoy your favourite content while you're out and about with this trio of tablets

MICROSOFT SURFACE 2

The king of content on the go, the Surface 2 does all that your desktop computer does, with more mobility. Watch films, read glossy magazines, play games, write documents, read books... Just don't fall asleep reading it, or you'll get a royal bruise on your forehead. All this potential bundled up earns it a kingly price tag, but with so much to do on it, you'll never be bored.

$529; microsoft.com

Harvey Norman stocks a range of e-readers and tablets at your local store, or online at harveynorman.com.au

KOBO AURA

For the classic e-reading experience, the Kobo Aura's silky matte screen is comfortable both in the hand and on the eye. With it you can access more than four million titles through the Kobo store and read them on the E Ink screen (either lit or unlit), designed to feel like a paper page. If reading books is what you're about, this little device is just for you.

$179.95; kobo.com

TOSHIBA ENCORE

This spritzly tablet runs on the same operating system as the Surface 2, but in a more compact package. While the construction feels less premium, so does the price tag. A smaller screen makes reading less hazardous, but also means you may need to squint to catch all the detail in the latest movie releases accessible through the Windows store.

$399/$459 (32/64GB); mytoshiba.com.au

★ TAKE IT APP ★ Check out these apps to enhance your reading experience

Farlex Dictionary. app
Discombobulated by the preponderance of sesquipedalian verbiage in your book? This free has millions of definitions a finger-tap away.

kobo

Kobo app
Purchase your e-books from the Kobo store and access them on any device you like with this app – available on all Apple, Android and Windows devices.

Cover app for Windows 8
For an immersive comic-reading experience, upload your favourite comic-book files to this reader designed specifically for stories told through art.